Uganda, Africa's tourism hub

Uganda is among the top ten countries known for their rich tourist attractions. Uganda's variety of natural resources range from diverse wildlife, forests, mountains, water bodies and wetlands that support not only wildlife but also bird sanctuaries and human populations.

A number of Uganda's people live alongside these tourism features. They have preserved their cultural diversity as well as nature herself has, so that Uganda is now popularly known as a great tourist attraction at the heart of the African continent.

Uganda receives foreign tourists who come to enjoy viewing these attractions at a fee charged by the Tourism Board.

Ugandans are encouraged to take part in indigenous tourism by charging them a subsidized fee.

Despite this consideration, Ugandans still shy away from enjoying the sites of their God-given natural tourism attractions even in this the twenty - first century.

Cholera

Cholera is a water-borne disease which has claimed many people lives. This disease is caused by using unsafe water and eating contaminated food. When water gets into contact with faecal matter, under the ground or when piped water is exposed to sewage or drainage systems, it gets contaminated.

To prevent contracting and spread of cholera, requires one to practice good health habits. Boil all drinking water or use water purifiers to ensure safety of your water. Cook food properly. Wash vegetables or fruits before eating them raw. Always cover your food and water. Avoid buying food from road side vendors.
